TODAY'S BUSINESS CHALLENGE:

Finding Media Placement Opportunities for Your Business

Every business has potential news-worthy stories to tell. There are all forms of media who are hungry for stories that educate or entertain their audiences on a daily basis. There are print options like blogs and articles or news magazines. Television and radio spots are always looking for new and interesting stories to cover. Podcasts are increasing in popularity but how do you get on one and how does it all work? And what about speaking opportunities?

But who has time to keep contacting all the people who decide what gets covered, by who and when? Does your company provide a product or service that more people need to know about? Do you have certain target markets that have specific ways that your products or services are used?

Producers from every media source can be difficult to get in touch. In fact, it can take valuable time away from running your business every month to try to keep your business details in front of producers for any potential story ideas.
